A BRIEF HISTORY OF POLITICAL CAMPAIGN ITEMS

Presidential political campaign items have been in use since the early 1800's. The early items include metal tokens, clothing buttons, cloth flags, and snuff boxes. Also china plates, walking canes, paper lanterns and drinking glasses were just a few of the more common items introduced into these early campaigns.

Beginning with the 1856 presidential campaigns and the advent of the advancement in photography, ferrotype and cardboard photos, both attached to metal pin backs with the images of the candidates were introduced into widespread use. These were used in all national presidential campaigns until 1896 with the introduction of the modern day celluloid campaign button.

Note that all of the above items described were used only in presidential campaigns. Lesser offices such as governor, US Congress, mayor, etc. did not see any use of this type material. The first use of material to promote lower offices were paper ballots beginning around 1840. Paper ballots were usually issued by the party listing a slate of candidates on inexpensive paper for the voter to take with them to the voting booth and deposit therein casting their vote.

These were in wide distribution for presidential campaigns as early as 1824 and in some instances in later years would include governor, lieutenant governor and various other offices. As time went on paper ballots were produced for a slate of candidates by the party in individual states during non-presidential years.

Around this same period broadsides were introduced in the campaigns. These were the early forms of what later would become the campaign poster. These early broadsides were usually printed on newsprint or very inexpensive paper. They were widely distributed as the cost was minimal and pasted on the sides of buildings, nailed to trees, and generally placed wherever they could draw the attention of the voting public to the candidate.

Ulysses S. Grant & Schuler Colfax 1868 President & VP Mass. paper ballot – Republican Party

For the period from 1840 till 1895 one of the most popular forms of campaign items was the political ribbon. The early ribbons were produced for presidential campaigns but beginning around 1860 these ribbons could also include candidates running for governor on the same ribbon that promoted the presidential and vice presidential nominees of a given party. Ribbons also began appearing promoting only the gubernatorial candidate and in some instances the lieutenant governor. These early textiles could be very plain or in many instances include images of the candidate along with patriotic symbols of the country, political party and various other graphics from their state or region.

The first ribbons were almost all silk and printed in black and white. As time went on color was introduced in not only the wording and graphics but the ribbons themselves were produced in a variety of colors. Again with the advent of the campaign button in 1895 ribbons began seeing their decline. By the 1920's very few campaign ribbons were being produced.

Millard Fillmore & Andrew Donelson 1856 President & VP silk ribbon – American (Know-Nothing) Party

Beginning in 1900 a new form of campaign item was introduced to the voting public: the political postcard. Postcards had been in use in America as early as 1873 but became very popular in 1898. Until that year the Federal Post Office was the only establishment allowed to print postcards. Once this restriction was lifted a huge outpouring of commercial postcards flooded the market. Postcards became the main form of communication between the masses as the telephone was in its infancy and just beginning to have widespread use.

William Jennings Bryan & John Kern 1908 President & VP postcard - Democratic Party

This postcard craze continued until after World War I but resulted in the largest output of political postcards and has not been duplicated since. The presidential political campaigns of 1900 through 1916 are the Golden Age for postcard production.

Postcards promoting candidates of lower offices did not start to appear until around 1908. Even today most candidates running for president, governor or US Senate produce postcards and still use them as a campaign tool to reach prospective voters.

The modern day celluloid campaign button had its origins in the 1895 gubernatorial campaigns of Ohio, New Jersey, Iowa, Kentucky, Maryland and Massachusetts. These celluloid buttons were produced by Whitehead & Hoag Co of Newark, New Jersey which went on to become the predominant manufacturer of campaign buttons during this early era. The following year, 1896, was a presidential campaign year which witnessed the introduction of celluloid buttons in the campaigns of Republican William McKinley and Democrat William Jennings Bryan. Due to the inexpensive cost to produce these buttons great quantities were manufactured and introduced during this campaign.

By 1920 a new even more inexpensive style of button was introduced; the lithograph tin button. These buttons are stamped and shaped by a die from one large sheet of tin reflecting multiple copies of the same image. In essence it is paint applied to tin with no covering. Due to this process the paint is quite susceptible to scratching in shipping or handling and cannot sustain wear as easily as celluloid buttons. Also due to the production requirements a minimal order of 10,000 buttons is required therein limiting the number of orders placed by this process. Thus the celluloid button of 1895 is still the most popular type in use some 100 plus years later after their introduction.

The History and Material Culture of Ohio Politics: 1803-2000

This essay is divided into five major sections. Each section roughly parallels the five national party systems that political scientists who adhere to critical election theory, use to describe American political history. The first system, Democratic-Republicans vs. Federalists, was a very weak party system in which universal white manhood suffrage was not the rule in all states, voters had weak identification with parties and Jeffersonians had only sporadic opposition after 1800. The second system started with the breakup of the Democratic-Republicans in the late 1820s into National Republicans and then Whigs vs. Jacksonian Democrats. The third system began with the withering away of the Whigs and the rise of the Republicans in the 1850s and continued after the Civil War until the 1890s with competitive but sectionalized, partisan strife between Republicans and Democrats. The fourth system, one of Republican dominance, began with the depression of the early 1890s and the takeover of the Democratic Party by the populists and Bryan in the middle of the decade. It ended with the advent of the Great Depression. The fifth system began with the political revolution spawned by the New Deal.

THE FIRST PARTY SYSTEM: 1803-1827

Ohio at the time of statehood, in 1803, was a largely one-party state -- Jefferson's Democratic-Republican party. The first territorial governor, Arthur St. Clair, was a strong Federalist, Federalists were elected to some offices, and a few of Ohio's statewide officials -- notably Governors Looker, Huntington, Miegs, Brown, and Trimble, and Senator Burnet -- either started their careers as Federalists or at times allied with Federalists during the first 25 years of statehood. Residual Federalist voting strength lay in the New England settled Western Reserve, the towns along the Miami River, (Dayton), Marietta on the Ohio River and among Quakers in eastern Ohio. However, most important battles in the early statehood period were fought between factions of the Democratic-Republicans.

Ohio's politics in these early years was characterized by factions. Factions formed around strong political personalities, they formed around loyalty to certain parts of the state (i.e. partisans of Chillicothe or Cincinnati as the Capitol) or ideology. Within the Democratic-Republican party prior to the War of 1812 were both partisans of a dominant legislature and partisans of a more equal role for the judiciary. The latter group was named the Quids and these politicians often aligned themselves with the small Federalist minority in the state. The exponents of the supremacy of the legislature were concentrated around Chillicothe and they formed Tammany Societies to further their goals. With the outbreak of the War of 1812 these divisions within the Democratic-Republican party disappeared.

There is little campaign material that has survived from this early statehood period. Though we have descriptions of Ohio towns being blanketed with paper handbills during some elections, all that is available today are some paper ballots and of course newspapers. These ballots were essential to electioneering in 19th century Ohio as the Australian secret ballot did not come to the state until the 1890s. Rather, parties printed up their slates on paper ballots and the voting preference of Ohio citizens' were widely known as they dropped these ballots into voting boxes or bowls.

Newspapers were also vital in this early period. Factions and parties depended on newspapers to spread their gospel and nearly all papers were strictly partisan publications. Moreover, aspiring politicians or factions often formed new newspapers as a principle part of their election strategy -- especially if the existing press in a given area was not friendly.

THE SECOND PARTY SYSTEM: DEMOCRATS AND WHIGS 1828-1854

With the election of John Quincy Adams in 1824 and then Andrew Jackson's election in 1828, Ohio's Democratic-Republicans factions began to coalesce into two competitive and distinct parties. The supporters of Jackson called themselves Democrats and insisted that they were the true heirs of Thomas Jefferson. The Adams and Henry Clay loyalists identified themselves as National Republicans and by 1834 and afterwards, Whigs. The term Whig was appropriated by Clay partisans to note their attachment to the revolutionary generation which called itself Whig in opposition to the outrages against freedom perpetrated by George III and his Tory government. Also in this period for the first time, third parties were active. In Ohio at least three third parties appeared on the ballot -- anti-Masonic Party, Liberty Party, and Free Soil Party.

During this era Whigs and Democrats fought a series of highly competitive races for the Governorship and the state legislature (which elected Ohio's U.S. Senators until 1914). One of the prime issues between the two major parties was the banking question. Generally, Whigs were much more supportive of banks and their paper currency than the Democrats. Another bone of contention was the issue of blacklaws repeal (state laws discriminating between whites and free blacks) and over the enforcement of fugitive slave laws. Generally, Whigs were more supportive of more equal treatment of blacks but this was not always the case. In the 1840s and early 1850s, alliances between the Free Soil Party and the Democrats fostered hope among politicians like U.S. Senator Salmon Chase that the Ohio Democratic Party could be the basis for a party that was opposed to the expansion of slavery.

In the course of the 1852 presidential and 1853 gubernatorial elections, the Whigs became spent as a political force in Ohio. Much of their electoral base in the New England settled Western Reserve (northeast corner of the state) had been weakened by the more avowedly abolitionist and temperance stances of the Free Soil party.

The first known silk ribbon for an Ohio gubernatorial candidate was produced in this period -- the "Wagon Boy" and Clay piece (OH-1). Wagon Boy, Thomas Corwin, was an exquisite orator who was a U.S. Senator, Ohio Governor and cabinet official during this period. This is a perfect example of the use of "celebrity" out of state candidates used by state parties to prop up their tickets. No other ribbons are known to exist from this era. Thus the Ohio collector has to be contented with paper ballots from this era. By the 1840s ballots began to get more elaborate with graphics supplementing the list of a party's candidates. Patriotic graphics like eagles, patriotic sayings, and intricate borders began to grace party ballots.

We know from numerous studies, that by 1840 party identification was highly solidified among American white males (the voting universe) and that public opinion was very supportive of political parties -- unlike the situation a mere 15 years earlier. However, party names appeared to be still evolving -- with both parties anxious to identify with the word "Democrat" in an era of recent universal manhood suffrage when the word "democracy" had a very positive connotation. The most striking evidence for this is the 1850 paper ballot for the Whig ticket headed by William Johnson for Governor (OH-AD-6). Rather than identifying the ticket as representing the Whig party, this particular ballot is identified as the "True Democratic Ticket".

THE THIRD PARTY SYSTEM: 1854-1892

It was during the third party system that non-paper political material began to appear. This was a period of intense party competition and by the end of the era, as campaigns began to spend large sums of money, a great deal of material (primarily silks) began to appear. As this material was central to the waging of campaigns in the 19th century, it is often closely linked to the slogans of the campaigns and the issues of the day.

Pre-Civil War Republicans vs. Democrats

The passage during the Pierce Administration of the Kansas-Nebraska Act of 1854, caused a political firestorm in Ohio. Democrats in the state were divided between loyalty to the Pierce Administration and public opinion at home. In the fall of 1854, Whigs, Free Soilers, and anti-Kansas Democrats put together an ad hoc coalition that swept the few state-wide elections that were on the ballot (Secretary of State and Supreme Court Justice) and the congressional delegation. The landslide was so complete that the Ohio House delegation went from a lineup of 12 Democrats, 7 Whigs, and 2 Free Soilers to a lineup of 0 Democrats and 21 adherents of the anti-Kansas-Nebraskan coalition.

The next year saw the coming together of most of the elements of this same coalition into the new Ohio Republican party. The new party system swept all Democrats -- including Governor William Medill -- from office by significant margins. The reaction to the Kansas-Nebraska Act, anti-foreign sentiment, and the antipathy to the Democrats' radical anti-bank policies all contributed to the landslide repudiation of the Democrats.

Salmon Chase, the Republican nominee that year, also garnered significant support from nativists as most of the individuals nominated on the Republican ticket that year were supportive of nativist policies. Still a hard core of nativists activists decided to nominate their own candidate for Governor on an American Party ticket -- former Governor Allen Trimble. The overwhelming Republican victory contributed to the quick end of the American Party and sealed the destruction of the Whigs.

From 1856 until the outbreak of the war Republicans and Democrats battled fiercely in Ohio. Democrats held themselves out as protectors of the Union and of the white man. The Republicans appealed to Ohioians on the basis of their opposition to slave power. In the 1857 and 1859 gubernatorial elections the Republicans maintained narrow majorities over the Democrats and the remnants of the Whigs and American Party did not even field tickets.

Non-paper items from the 1850s are very scarce. There are two known Chase ribbons but it is not certain these items were produced for Chase's two gubernatorial races or whether one or both represent presidential hopeful items from 1856, 1860, or 1868.

The most interesting paper ballot from the immediate pre-Civil War period is the 1855 American party ballot with Salmon Chase for Governor (OH-7). This ballot highlights Chase's strategy of uniting elements of the nativist party (thus the American Party designation) with the new anti-slavery Republicans.

Waving the Bloody Shirt and the White Man's Party: 1860-1869

The vast majority of Ohio Democrats were united behind Stephen Douglas in the 1860 elections but when war broke out in the spring of 1861, the Ohio Democracy was split between War Democrats and Peace Democrats (later to be called Copperheads). The War Democrats, led at the national level by Douglas until his death in June of 1861, pledged their support for the Lincoln administration's war effort. Their opponents were eager to find compromises to keep the Union together and avoid civil war.

In 1861 the Republican Party did not run a state-wide ticket. Rather some War Democrats joined with Republicans to form a Union Ticket which nominated for governor, two-time Democratic gubernatorial nominee, David Tod. Despite a request from the Union party to join together, the Democrats nominated their own ticket -- headed by War Democrat, Hugh Jewett -- on a Peace Democratic platform. The results were a large majority for Tod and the rest of the Union ticket.

The 1862 elections for congress and lesser state-wide offices resulted in the first Democratic state-wide victory since 1853. Frustration over the course of the war, unhappiness with the possibility of emancipation, plus the fact that Union soldiers were unable to vote at the front, all contributed to the narrow Democratic majority.

The 1863 Ohio gubernatorial race was the most important state-wide election in Ohio's history. For the Lincoln administration it was a vital signal as to whether the northern electorate would continue to support the Administration in an increasingly bloody war. Moreover, the Democratic candidate was the leading Copperhead of the day -- ex-Congressman Clement Vallandigham. Earlier in the year, the military authority in Ohio had expelled Vallandigham to Confederate territory (where he proceeded to flee to Canada) for seditious speech. The Union ticket was again headed by a War democrat, former Ohio Auditor, John Brough. Union victories at Gettysburg and Vicksburg along with an absentee ballot program for soldiers insured a Union landslide.

The remaining three gubernatorial elections of this momentous decade -- 1865, 1867, and 1869 -- followed a similar pattern. The Union tickets (for all intents and purposes the Republican ticket after the war) won narrow victories over the reunited Democratic opposition. In each of these elections Republicans tarred Democrats as traitors and Democrats called themselves the "White Man's Party" in opposition to Republican support for black rights.

The most notable of these elections was the contest between Republican Rutherford B. Hayes and the Democratic elder statesman, Allen Thurman (later to be Grover Cleveland's running mate in 1888). One of Thurman's campaign slogans which was used by Democratic women was "Fathers save us from Negro Equality". Republicans responded "Honest Black Men are Preferable to White Traitors". Thurman lost a very close election but Democrats captured the Ohio legislature, ensuring the defeat of the radical Republican U.S. Senator, Ben Wade. In his place the Democratic legislature rejected their party's convention choice for U.S. Senator, Clement Vallandigham, and turned to Thurman.

Ballots and silk ribbons are what remains from the campaigns of the 1860s. Graphics abound on many of the ballots of the decade. Democratic ballots include references to preservation of the union ("The Constitution as it is. The Union as it was."), and reassurance of the party's patriotism ("I am not a friend of the Confederates States or their cause, but its Enemy"). Also ballots of this decade include the first appearance of the rooster as a symbol of the Democratic Party. Republican ballots make reference to "traitors", "vigorous prosecution of the war and no compromises", and to preservation of the Union.

The importance of the 1863 elections to the national Republican administration may well be reflected in the fact that collectors know of at least three silk ribbons that were produced for the Brough campaign (OH-22, OH-AD-12, OH-AD-13). On these ribbons are references to traitors, protecting the "star spangled banner", "unconditional union", and "rally round the flag boys".

Later in the decade the first Democratic Party ribbons appear. In 1865 the Morgan campaign produced at least two ribbons which make it clear that the Democratic ticket is the "white man's ticket" (OH-31, OH-AD-17). A paper item from 1867 for Allen Thurman makes a similar point.

Greenbacks, Prohibition, and the Tariff: 1870-1892

With the passage by the Ohio legislature of the 15th Amendment (black suffrage) the old issues of war and reconstruction faded. That most famous Copperhead, Clement Vallandigham led the move to a new era by persuading the Democratic convention of 1871 to drop the "Negro issue" and adopt a "New Departure" platform -- acceptance of the war results (black suffrage), low tariffs, civil service reform, and economy in government.

In 1873 the Democrats reached back to a bygone era to nominate former Senator (1837-1849) and old Jacksonian, William Allen for Governor of Ohio. The economic depression of the early 1870s and the corruption associated with the Grant Administration enabled the Democrats to appeal to liberal Republicans who had supported Horace Greeley's candidacy in 1872. Allen won a very narrow victory over incumbent Republican Edward Noyes. He was the first Democrat elected Governor in twenty years.

Two years later the Republican nominated Rutherford Hayes for an unprecedented third term to oppose Allen. In a campaign that captured international attention Hayes ran against the soft money views of Governor Allen and won a very narrow victory.

Starting in 1869 third parties returned to the Ohio ballot. In that year the Prohibition Party nominated a gubernatorial candidate (they would continue to nominate candidates in every gubernatorial election until 1920). By the late 1870s the softmoney Greenback party was running candidates and in the 1880s they were joined by the Union Labor party.

Though the Democrats had rejected anti-black rhetoric and with it the issues of the Civil War, the conflict did not disappear from campaigns. In 1879 the Republican candidate for Governor, Charles Foster, was ridiculed by Democrats for avoiding the war and instead selling supplies (calico cloth) to the Union armies. The Foster campaign turned the derision around and adopted the nickname, "Calico Charlie" as its own campaign slogan. In the 1880s Democratic President Cleveland suggested that Northern states return captured Confederate battle flags to the south as a way of binding up wounds. Republican gubernatorial candidate and Union veteran Joseph "Fire Alarm" Foraker, thundered "no rebel flags will be surrendered while I am Governor." Such rhetoric had enormous appeal in 1887 to thousands of Ohio voters who had fought in the Grand Army of the Republic (GAR).

But waving the bloody shirt was not the only issue dividing the parties. In 1889 Congressman James Campbell unseated two-term incumbent Governor Foraker in a closely contested vote. Campbell supporters attacked Foraker's attempt for three terms ("what Washington wouldn't have and Grant couldn't get") but also appealed to voters on the issues of home rule for Ohio's cities and election reform (adoption of the Australian secret ballot). Both Foraker and Campbell were acknowledged to be two of the most gifted campaigners in the country and individuals with national ambitions. Thus the national press, as well as the Ohio press, covered this 1889 race.

Two years later former congressman William McKinley narrowly unseated Campbell. Once again two Ohio candidates were viewed as potential presidential aspirants. This time the issue was a national one -- the tariff. McKinley was a national figure because of his championship of high tariff rates and the Democrats attacked him vigorously for increasing the price of wool to American consumers. Republicans fired back that the McKinley tariff was responsible for the flourishing of American tin manufacturing in Ohio and a resulting increase in employment.

Practically the only political item available to collectors who are searching for early 1870s material are paper --- primarily paper ballots. By the late 1870s ballots were losing their graphic appeal and usually just listed the party's slate. There are two known examples of very rare 1875 Hayes silk ribbons and two equally rare Allen pieces from 1873 or 1875 (OH-53 & OH-54 and OH-38 & OH-39).

The extensive use of silk ribbons in state races (undoubtedly a direct reflection of the amount of money spent in these races) really began with the races of "Calico Carlie" Foster in 1879 and 1881. Foster was not only rich enough to run expensive campaigns, he was a student of campaign techniques and Ohio politics. Two of the four Foster ribbons make use of the "calico" theme (OH-65 & OH-66).

Democrat Joseph Hoadley produced two known silk ribbons for either his 1883 or his 1885 race. The Hoadley paper poll book pictured in this project is a perfect illustration of the importance of "get out the vote" in an era when partisan identifications were deep, the undecided vote was always small and bringing your supporters to the polls was the difference between victory and defeat. Even the Prohibition Party began producing silks as there are two known ribbons for their 1885 campaign for Governor. The GOP, however, produced the bulk of the ribbons for this decade. This probably reflects the fact that the Republicans were somewhat better organized and somewhat better funded than their Democratic rivals. There are at least 34 known Foraker ribbons for his three gubernatorial races and his two inaugurals of the decade. There are also a couple of Foraker governor related medals. The 1887 Foraker items make reference to the "no rebel flags will be surrendered while I am Governor," controversy. Many Foraker items also use the term, "Vim, Vigor and Victory," a possible reference to Foraker's booming voice and aggressive campaign style.

Also in this period we find the first hopeful items appearing. Until 1914 all Ohio statewide party nominations were determined by yearly nomination conventions. These became major extravaganzas with the delegates and other supporters of various hopeful candidates flooding the nominating cities (usually the larger cities of Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, etc.) to boost their candidates. By the 1880s hopeful candidates were producing silk ribbons for these conventions.

Governor Campbell is the first Democratic candidate whose non-paper campaign material is extensive. One Campbell silk (OH-132) and one Campbell paper item feature the title of a popular Victorian song, "The Campbells are coming," as the Campbell campaign theme. The song was about the lifting of the siege of Lucknow by the Scottish General Sir Colin Campbell during the Indian mutiny of 1857. On the ribbon candidate Campbell is dressed as a Scottish bagpiper. Campbell material from the 1891 race highlights 24¢ wool as an outcome of the McKinley bill. The Campbell campaigns also made use of two picture studs (OH-137 & OH-138) and a hanger (OH-139). The hanger is a peculiarly Ohio campaign invention. Those used extensively in Ohio gubernatorial and Senate elections between the early 1890s and the 1920s, it does not, according to locals expert David Quintin show up in any other states' campaigns -- except for a few items in the neighboring Indiana and West Virginia.

One of the more elaborate Campbell pieces -- not unlike presidential pieces of the era but unusual for an Ohio local -- is a metal horseshoe with a cardboard picture of the candidate (OH-135). Lettering on the horseshoe reads "Democracy's Mascot". There is also a picture of a camel which either signifies that camel sounds like Campbell or that the camel is some unknown reference to Campbell's stand on temperance. A piece that no collector has yet run across but which was produced for the 1889 campaign, according to historical accounts, were miniature carpenter rules that highlight Campbell's support for home rule for Ohio's cities.

The McKinley gubernatorial campaign of 1891 and 1893 produced an even greater volume of non-paper items. Most notable among the 1891 items are a large number of "tin" pieces which highlighted the McKinley tariff's beneficial effect on the American tin industry and its employees. One McKinley ribbon from that year (OH-175) illustrates McKinley's help for both the American tin and the American wool industries.

THE FOURTH PARTY SYSTEM: 1893-1928

For presidential campaign items the end of the 1890s and the first decade of the twentieth century was a golden age. The same is true for Ohio items. Not only were celluloid buttons introduced but a profusion of interesting ribbons and hangers are available to the Ohio collector. During most of this era the Republican Party dominated both Ohio and the nation and at times this electoral dominance is also reflected in the number and variety of Ohio political items issued for the candidates of the two parties.

Republican Dominance: 1893-1908

The economic depression that began shortly after President Cleveland's inauguration in 1893 created the conditions for a long Republican ascendancy at both the national level and in Ohio. Governor McKinley was re-elected in 1893 by the largest state-wide percentage since the Civil War. Between McKinley's first election in 1891 and the next Democratic gubernatorial victory, 14 years and seven elections transpired.

The severe economic downturn which lasted from 1893-1897 gave rise to the success of the Populist Party. The party's 1895 gubernatorial nominee Jacob Coxey (of Coxey's Army fame) captured an impressive 6.2% of the vote. Democrats in Ohio turned away from the laissez faire economic policies of the Cleveland Administration and wholeheartedly adopted the cause of Bryan and free silver.

After McKinley's two terms in the governor's mansion, Asa Bushnell, his successor, defeated the Democrats twice. Bushnell's successor, George Nash, also won reelection. And when the Democrats embraced reform in 1903 by nominating the famous Cleveland progressive, Mayor Tom L. Johnson, they went down to defeat by a landslide margin to Cleveland businessman Myron T. Herrick. In fact during these years intra-party GOP competition -- between the McKinley/Marcus Hanna wing of the party and the Senator Foraker wing -- was often the main attraction in Ohio politics. Hanna's organizational and fundraising talents helped elect McKinley Governor and President. Once McKinley was safely ensconced in the White House, Hanna began planning for his own political future.

In early 1897 Hanna convinced McKinley to appoint aging Ohio Senator John Sherman to Secretary of State. Then Hanna twisted Governor Bushnell's arm to appoint Hanna to the vacant senate seat. Bushnell, a Foraker ally, had been nominated at the 1895 convention because Foraker forces had effective control of the party machinery. By 1897 Hanna was in the driver seat and he made it plain to Bushnell that the price of renomination was the U.S. Senate seat. But to be elected to the remainder of the Sherman term as well as to the full term that began in 1898. Hanna had to be selected by the legislature. After the 1897 election the GOP continued to control the legislature but a coalition of Foraker Republicans and Democrats almost succeeded in defeating Hanna with the candidacy of Cleveland's "boy mayor", Robert E. McKisson. The campaign for the Senate seat was fierce and there were numerous charges that the Hanna forces won by paying legislators for their vote.

In 1903 Hanna was obsessed with winning a big republican majority again. First, because his Cleveland rival, and economical radical, Mayor Johnson was the Democratic candidate for governor. But even more importantly the legislature elected in 1903 would decide whether the Senator would be re-elected. The 1903 GOP landslide insured Hanna's second term but within weeks of being selected for a second term, Hanna was dead. The legislature then selected Congressman Charles Dick, Hanna's chief lieutenant as his successor. But with the passing of Hanna, the Republican party of Ohio lost its grip on power.

In 1905 Democrat John Pattison ran against Republican bossism (particularly Boss Cox of Cincinnati). Pattison also had the support of Ohio's Temperance movement which was angry with incumbent Governor Herrick. Pattison won but only lived to serve less than six months in office. Republican Lt. Governor Andrew Harris, an elderly Civil War veteran, took office and did not face another election until 1908 because of a change in the state constitution which moved Ohio gubernatorial elections to even years. But in 1908 voter fatigue with perceived corruption in the state house along with the liquor interests' opposition to Harris enabled President Cleveland's former Attorney General, Judson Harmon, to capture the governorship.

Meanwhile, Ohio's senior U.S. Senator Joseph Foraker ran into trouble with President Theodore Roosevelt. After a riot by black cavalry troops in Brownsville, Texas, the President discharged a whole battalion of black soldiers. Foraker, a breed of old-style politician that the young President inherently distrusted, defended the soldiers as victims of prejudice. At least one political pin for Foraker highlights this defense (OH-USS-10). Though Roosevelt designated William Howard Taft as his successor, Foraker began planning his own challenge to Taft. Before that plan got very far, the Hearst newspapers published a letter from Standard oil that suggested the company had bribed the Senator. That was the end, not only for Foraker's presidential ambitions but also of his Senate tenure. In 1908 the Republican legislature elected Congressman Theodore Burton to the Foraker seat.

Ohio collectors have a bonanza of material available to them from this fifteen year period. Besides silk ribbons there are celluloid studs (introduced in 1895), celluloid pin backs, celluloid stickpins, cloth stick pins, glass stickpins, postcards, hangers, cardboard studs and medals. There are also large varieties of items for each candidate. This is especially true for the successful Republican gubernatorial candidates McKinley, Bushnell, Nash, and Herrick. For the Democratic gubernatorial candidates there are only four items for L.T. Neal's 1893 race and eight items for Chapman's 1897 race. All of these items are quite rare. There are about a dozen items for John McLean's 1899 race and a similar number for Kilbourne's 1901 race, Johnson's 1903 race and the Pattison campaign of 1905 -- some of these items from these four Democratic campaigns are readily available to the collector. By 1908 there was a greater variety of items for Harmon, the Democrat, than there was for Harris, the Republican.

There are also some third party items available from Coxey's 1895 race and Samuel "Golden Rule" Jones 1899 Non-Partisan party race. Moreover, there is a profusion of hopeful items produced for county and state party conventions. These pieces were largely produced for Republican hopefuls in the 1895-99 period though there are a few Democratic items from the 1890s and more from the 1901, 1903, 1905, and 1908 elections. The Coxey items and most of the hopeful material are difficult to find.

In the 1890s, for the first time material was produced for a U.S. Senate race. Hanna raised an unprecedented amount of money for McKinley's races and he did not skimp on his own contests. Some of the Hanna items were clearly made for the vote in the state legislature or the GOP caucus of legislators but other coattail material indicated that Hanna, especially in 1903, was an active part of the Republican general election campaign -- a vote for a Republican state legislator translating into support for Hanna for U.S. Senate. There are also ribbon, hanger, and celluloid material for Senator Foraker and his U.S. Senate races that were decided by the legislature.

As in earlier periods much of this campaign paraphernalia tells us a great deal about the issues and Ohio political culture of this era. One of the first things one notices is that unlike presidential items from this period, there is little color used in the celluloids -- most of them are black and white or sepia. This is probably because Ohio gubernatorial campaigns, even ones Hanna financed, did not have as much money available to them on a per vote basis as the national campaigns of that era.

Nicknames and campaign slogans continued to show up. A few of the 1893 McKinley items (OH-182 & OH-196) refer to the future president as "The Ohio Napoleon". The Coxey celluloids (OH-209, OH-210, OH-AD-43) use the slogan "Keep Off the Grass." This refers to the fact that the Coxey Army marchers were arrested when they stepped on the Capitol lawn in 1894. There is the play on words used for the pin with a drawing of two candidates on a pair of playing cards (OH-227). This pin was for the ticket of Asa Bushnell and Asah Jones and tells us that two aces are "A hard pair to beat." Finally, there is the use of the 4Hs slogan -- "Herrick, Harding, Hanna, and Harmony" (OH-410 & OH-411) -- which was coined by a leading Republican paper in 1903 to back a ticket for Herrick for Governor, Warren G. Harding for Lt. Governor, and Hanna for U.S. Senate.

In the 1990s vendor pins, pins not produced by the campaigns but by commercial vendors, became an issue of contention for locals collectors. But material produced by commercial interests and not by campaigns were a fact of life of the 1890s as well. Witness the incredibly rare pair of celluloid spinners (OH-259 & OH-260) which have either the 1897 Democratic or Republican candidate on one side and a color advertisement for flour on the other.

In this era there are numerous examples of using the Lt. Governor on items -- from the McKinley-Harris ribbons of the early 1890s to the beautiful Nash-Nippert celluloids from the 1902 inaugural (OH-345 & OH-346). There is the use of three candidates as in the Nash ribbon (OH-318) with President McKinley and recently elected New York Governor Roosevelt. But perhaps the most spectacular example is the Bushnell (for Governor), Jones (for Lt. Governor), Hanna (U.S. Senate) trigate ribbon (OH-246). This ribbon not only has the pictures of all three candidates but the campaign theme of smoking factories to represent the return of prosperity under a national Republican administration.

The issue of Republican prosperity was also used by the 1897 Bushnell campaign in the 1897 stickpin celluloid (OH-245) which makes reference to a prosperity which was brought on by protection, high prices for wheat and low prices for silver. The Democrats adherence to silver ("16-1") is highlighted in one of the two known Chapman ribbons (OH-265). The other Chapman ribbon (OH-267) takes a very different tack by portraying this supporter of the populist position of free silver as also "A representative of the Business Interests or our State." The reformer Tom L. Johnson used "Home Rule" for Ohio cities and "Just Taxation" on his celluloid (OH-377).

Finally the use of party symbols/animals makes its appearance in items from this time period. Bushnell used the Whig's "coon" cutting off a rooster's head as a symbol of Republican victory over the Democratic (OH-253). Democrats from McLean to Johnson to Pattison to Harmon used the rooster to represent their partisan affiliation.

Progressivism, War and Return to Normalcy: 1909-1928

Between Harmon's election in 1908 and the beginning of the Depression of 1930, Democrats won nine out of twelve gubernatorial elections in Ohio. At the same time the GOP more often than not controlled the Ohio state legislature as Ohioians learned to increasingly split their tickets.

During this period Ohio political campaigns began losing the fascination with campaign memorabilia. By the twenties candidates voices could be heard on the radio and their pictures could be seen in movie newsreels. Moreover, in earlier periods politics was one of the few forms of entertainment in rural and small town Ohio. But by the second or third decade of the new century few cared about a torch light political parade when you could see much more impressive pageantry any night at the local movie theatre or hear it on your radio. No wonder little celluloid picture buttons began to lose their appeal for campaigns and the voters.

Though Judson Harmon was viewed as a more conservative Democrat than someone like Tom L. Johnson, his administration caught the wave of progressive reform and is remembered for such reforms as the centralized management of the state's penal and charitable institutions, Ohio's first employer liability law, Ohio's first public service commission, ratification of the federal income tax, maximum-hour law for working women, and the initiative and referendum for Ohio cities. His personal integrity, the popularity of progressive reform and the growing progressive/conservative split in the GOP lead to a Harmon landslide in1910 -- against former Lt. Governor Warren G. Harding.

In 1912 Harmon ran for the Democratic nomination for president and failed. In his place Ohio elected a progressive Democratic Congressman James Cox. Cox's 1912 landslide was made possible by the split in the GOP and the huge vote awarded to the Progressive ticket headed by Arthur Garford -- 21%. The first Cox administration was a hothouse of progressive reform. Cox initiated reforms included direct primary laws, court reorganization, civil service protection extension, workmen's compensation, children's codes and municipal charter reform. By 1914 progressivism had peaked and Cox lost his reelection bid narrowly to Congressman Frank Willis. In 1916 and 1918 Cox-Willis rematches resulted in close Democratic victories. However, little new progressive reforms were instituted in Cox's second and third terms.

In 1920 Ohio was ready to return to normalcy and popular Democratic Auditor "Honest Vic" Donahey went down in defeat to Cleveland's Republican Mayor Harry L. Davis. But Donahey was not alone as the entire Democratic state ticket and the entire congressional ticket was defeated in the Harding landslide. Donahey came back to win gubernatorial victories in 1922, 1924, and 1926. Donahey was a conservative Democratic. His appeal came from his reputation for honesty and economy in government. During his three terms Donahey vetoed a huge number of spending bills only to have his veto overridden by the Republican legislature. In 1928 Republicans, aided by the Hoover landslide, recaptured the state house by running Myers Y. Cooper of Cincinnati.

Meanwhile, in 1914 Ohio moved to directly elect U.S. Senators. The Democrats nominated the first state-wide elected Roman Catholic Attorney General Timothy Hogan. The Republicans nominated their defeated 1910 gubernatorial candidate, Warren G. Harding, who easily took the seat. In 1926 a woman, Judge Florence Allen, made a credible run for the Democratic Senate nomination. While Democrats dominated in gubernatorial races, Republicans usually won the Senate elections with Senators Burton, Willis, and Fess. A Democratic legislature elected in 1910 selected Tom L. Johnson protégé Atlee Pomerene for one Senate term (re-elected by popular vote in 1916 and defeated in 1922).

The period between 1908 and 1928 saw the continued use of the celluloid pin-backs and the introduction of lithograph pin-backs and lithograph tabs in Ohio political campaigns. At the same time Ohio hangers disappeared as campaign paraphernalia (last used in 1920) and silk ribbons, though still used, became less prominent. Furthermore political paraphernalia of the period is generally less elaborate than in the preceding decade. There are few ribbons with tassels or attached celluloids and there are fewer colored or elaborate celluloid pin-backs.

This does not mean that there were not rare and valuable pieces produced during this time. The two Harding for Governor picture celluloids (OH-485 & OH-486) are rare and very pricey. The Wilson/Cox coattail may well be the most valuable of all Ohio political items and nearly all of the other Cox for Governor pieces are in great demand.

Campaign slogans and themes continued to show up on Ohio items. These include Harry Daugherty's "Bread, Butter, and Business" pin-back (OH-USS-80). Though Daugherty lost the GOP U.S. Senate primary to ex-Governor Herrick, he went on to manage the 1920 Harding presidential campaign, become U.S. Attorney General under Harding and played a large role in the scandals of the administration.

The Progressive candidate (Garford) and the Prohibition candidate (Poling) issued celluloids in 1912. But within a few years, with the adoption of national prohibition, the dry party stopped running candidates for state-wide office, even though the liquor issue did not go away. The Republican wet candidate of 1924, Homer Durand, issued a couple of pins with anti-prohibition messages (OH-601 & OH-602).

The most notable paper item of this period may be the 1920 Harding-Davis-Willis "Equality for All" palm size flyer which features black candidates for office. This piece was also produced as a poster and illustrates how the black vote remained a largely Republican constituency well into the 20th century. The automobile also created a couple of new forms of political advertising in the 1920s -- license plate attachments, tire covers, and within a few decades, bumper stickers.

THE FIFTH PARTY SYSTEM AND BEYOND: 1929-2000

The fifth party system was ushered in by the Great Depression and resulted in Democratic dominance of national politics from the 1930s through the 1960s. The expected partisan realignment never happened in the 1970s, 1980s, and 1990s. Rather Ohio voters, like voters nationally, became increasingly less partisan and increasingly more willing to split tickets. Ohio was a battleground state during this era because it was usually slightly more Republican than the nation as a whole. Ohio Democrats through much of the period (1930s-1960s) were often more conservative than national Democratic administrations and Ohio Republicans formed the core of the GOP's conservative old guard.

Campaign materials produced during this era reflected the changing way politicians communicated with voters. With the rise of mediums like movies, radio, and television, fewer buttons and ribbons were produced by campaigns.

New Deal Realignment: 1929-1968

In 1930 the effects of the Depression led to Democratic state-wide victories for Governor (George White, a Cox protégé) and for U.S. Senate (Robert Bulkley). Through the 1936 elections Democrats dominated both Ohio's congressional delegations (ex-Governor Donahey joined Bulkley in the Senate in 1934) and the State house (Martin Davey was elected Governor in 1934 and 1936).

In 1938 former Republican Attorney General John Bricker was elected Governor and Robert Taft (son of President William Howard Taft) was elected to the U.S. Senate. By this date the new partisan lineup of the state had solidified. Democrats lost much of their old rural base and replaced it with huge Democratic margins in the industrial cities of the northern part of the state -- Cleveland, Youngstown, Akron, and Toledo. Ethnic, Catholic voters, black voters, and organized labor became the backbone of the Ohio Democratic coalition. Republicans in turn relied on smaller margins in the large counties which included Columbus and Cincinnati (where older ethnic groups like the Germans or the Irish predominated) and rural majorities throughout the state.

The embodiment of this change was Mayor Frank Lausche of Cleveland. Lausche was of eastern European heritage and in 1944 he became the first Roman Catholic elected Governor of Ohio. Between 1944 and 1954 Lausche won five of six gubernatorial elections and in 1956 and again in 1962 he was elected to the U.S. Senate. Lausche was a conservative who worked to keep down taxes and he often clashed with the Democratic Administration in Washington or with organized labor. HIs electoral success was based on both his appeal to traditionally blue collar ethnic constituencies in the north of the state and to more independent and Republican voters who appreciated his conservatism.

Except for Lausche, Republicans dominated state-wide office in the 1940s and 1950s until 1958. In that recession year, Republicans supported a right to work measure which infuriated and mobilized organized labor. Almost the entire GOP ticket went down to defeat (including then Senator Bicker) and Mike DiSalle of Toledo, another Roman Catholic, was elected Governor. In 1960 John Kennedy's Catholicism was a major factor in his surprisingly large defeat in Ohio and in 1962, State Auditor Jim Rhodes retook the Governor's chair by calling DiSalle, "Tax Hike Mike." For the rest of the decade (with the exception of the 1964 Democratic landslide year when incumbent Senator Steve Young narrowly defeated Bob Taft Jr.), Republicans, led by Rhodes and strong organization (mobilized by state, and later national party chair, Ray Bliss) dominated the state. Rhodes, like Lausche before him, dominated his party and state politics for nearly twenty years.

During the Depression, relatively few political items were issued for either party. What was issued was often less expensive lithograph pins and tabs. Candidates' faces appear less often on these items and name pins became more prevalent. In the 1940s, 1950s, and 1960s these trends combined. Other types of campaign items also surfaced: ink blotters, sewing kits, decals, thimbles, jewelry (see DiSalle cufflinks and tie bar), and flasher pin-backs. Also campaign postcards continued to be used extensively.

A number of unusual and/or rare items surfaced during these decades. These includes the White Inaugural Smoker (OH-703), the Ingalls picture pin (OH-713), the Communist Onda pin (OH-735), the Davey Kent State Club (OH-662), The Davey Picture pin with 1936 ribbons (OH-672 & OH-673), Brown name pins (Oh-705 & OH-707), the FDR/Lausche coattails (OH-779 & OH-781), and a few Rhodes pins (OH-887 & OH-898). The Dewey/Lausche split ticket coattail (OH-798) is illustrative of a changing political landscape in which split-ticket voting became increasingly common.

Split Ticket Voting in the 1970s, 1980s, and 1990s

The Republican dominance in Columbus ended with the Crofters Scandal of 1970 which implicated a number of Republican state-wide office holders. Former Congressman John Gilligan, who had defeated Frank Lausche in a 1968 Democratic Senate primary only to lose the general to Attorney General Bill Saxbe, became the new Governor and ushered in an era of Democratic dominance. Though Rhodes upset Gilligan in 1974 and narrowly won re-election in 1978, Democrats dominated the legislature, the other state-wide offices and the two U.S. Senate seats (John Glenn and Howard Metzenbaum) throughout much of the 1970s and 1980s.

This Democratic dominance came to an end with the election of George Voinovich as Governor in 1990. Voinovich's landslide re-election in 1994 was the largest electoral majority since the introduction of two party politics in the 1830s. GOP victories continued with the election of Mike DeWine to a U.S. Senate seat in 1994, and the Republican gubernatorial and senate victories in 1998.

Probably the most significant development in the production of campaign memorabilia over the last thirty years is the appearance of vendor pins. As far back as the nineteenth century, non-campaign sources produced campaign pins as a way to promote products or to sell to partisans during campaign season. However, by the 1980s, as campaigns produced less and less pins and ribbons, commercial vendors began cranking out a great deal of material for partisans and sometimes for collectors of Ohio state material. By 1998 the vast majority of campaign material for both Democratic and Republican campaigns in Ohio was produced by third party vendors.

Lots of new items were issued in the last three decades. Drinking glasses, pottery ashtrays, china plates, china ashtrays, jewelry, plastic bottle tops had been produced in earlier decades but became more prevalent by the 1970s. Also for the first time enamel lapel pins became very popular. An indication of the lower priority campaigns put on such promotion as pins in an era of multi-million dollar television buys, is the growth of paper stickers in campaigns.

Campaign paraphernalia for Ohio state-wide races tell us a great deal about the nature of politics and the role of politics in society in any given time period. In two hundred years Ohio campaigns have gone from low cost affairs that only produced paper, to elaborate rites which captivated the late nineteenth century citizenry with elaborate silks and celluloids, to very expensive affairs where most dollars are spent on electronic media to capture the attention of an apathetic electorate. Yet even at the millennium, in an age where party politics captures the imagination of relatively few citizens, partisans of all stripes still demand political material to demonstrate their commitments to party ideology and personalities.

in the State government. As president of the oldest agricultural organization in Ohio, Mr. Cooper knows the farm problems from a practical view-point and will insist that the state agricultural department be directed by practical farmers. Myers Y. Cooper is a home builder and a large employer of labor in Cincinnati. He is a capable executive and will put business methods

There is not a doubt about Mr. Coope leng personally dry and in sympathy with Prohittion and its enforcement. For twenty-five years he has been loyal to the dry cause, and during the campaign for auto-wide Peohibition here in Obio gave his support to the dry organization in Chromatt and through out the state. He is a prominent church man and is President of the Ohio Council of Churches.

Myers Y. Cooper is the leader of the Repub-lican perty in Ohio. He accomplished the unusual feat of cutting the 1924 Democratic planning from 180,000 to less than 17,000. He is the logical standard-bearer for the Republican party again this year. He can be elected in November!

Until the 16th Amendment is repealed, Americans should at less have an income tax reporting system that makes sense. This simple tax return incorporates the following features:

- Based on flat rate of 19%
- · A $5,000 exemption, married filing jointly
- · Eliminates inflationary "Bracket Creep"

Philip Herzing

- · All "unearned income" is tax free
- · Eliminates capital gains tax

Acknowledgments

This is the sixth reference book in this series of state governors and U.S. Senators campaign material. Texas, Illinois, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and California having been published beginning in 2018.

The first five books primarily utilized the material from my own collection which was assembled over a fifty year period beginning in 1971. Due to the large quantity of campaign material produced for the Ohio political campaigns, I made the decision to publish this volume with a co-author, Ira Forman.

Ira was born in Ohio but has lived most of his life in Washington, D.C. We met over twenty five years ago at an annual political memorabilia show in Columbus, Ohio. This show brought us together for many years until raising a family and work overrode the amount of time available for collecting.

These early years were truly the "golden years" for collecting state campaign material. The term frequently used "the window is closing" refers to the end of a period when a specific thing is becoming harder to find due to its scarcity is certainly true today with regard to many of the early items in this reference. Although most of the early twentieth century material we collected was scarce, looking back in some cases, there was never more than a dozen or so of a given item that had survived to be collected. As a collector this did not become a realization until many years later. So much of the material in this book has not been on the market in years and so much of it is scarce to the extent only two or three are known to exist.

Ira's extensive ephemera material -- ballots, posters, handouts, brochures, etc. -- has added completeness to this reference that would be lacking otherwise. He produced a similar 400 page Ohio Political Items project in 1999 which took him over 10 years to complete. Much of this book is taken from that 1999 book and expanded. The completeness of the data in this reference is based on his extensive research of the subject matter for the 1999 book. It has truly been a labor of love putting this book together with him to see its completion

Another avid Ohio collector, Steve Davis, also furnished many of the images in this book. Always willing to provide color images from his extensive Ohio collection, Steve was as excited and enthusiastic to the completeness of this book as the two co-authors. He is to be thanked for all his help. Also thanks goes to two other avid collectors -- Matt Dole and John Vargo. Both provided needed material to make this book a more complete reference.

Again, as they have for the earlier five volumes, the two Texas sisters Sarah O'Pella and Mary O'Pella have been helping me navigate the publishing world. Sarah for all her computer skills formatting all the pages and sending the completed book to the printer. Mary is the artist and designed the front and back covers as well as some of the layout. It has been a real treat working with them both and a special thanks for all their input.

This book would not have been possible to publish without the assistance of the Frisco Public Library in Frisco, Texas and their printing group Trail Blazer Press. Adam Lamprecht, senior librarian with the Trail Blazer Press group was a pleasure to work with to bring all these books to their final publication and a special thank you is extended.

About the Authors

David Quintin is a lifetime collector of political campaign memorabilia. His focus for the last forty-five years has been political items used in the campaigns for United States Senators and governors for all fifty states.

He is a member of the American Political Items Collectors, APIC, and currently the Locals editor of the organizations publication, The Keynoter. Information for the APIC is available on the organizations website at APIC.US. David Quintin can be reached at DQTEXAS@AOL.COM

Ira Forman began collecting political memorabilia in 1968. His primary focus has been political items used by candidates for governor and the United States Senate in the state of Ohio. In the last decade, he has also collected items related to Jewish candidates.

His professional life has at times overlapped with his love of American political history. From 1968 until 1990, he worked for and ran a number of political campaigns in the state of Ohio. From 1996 to 2010, he was the Executive Director of the National Jewish Democratic Council, where he co-edited the book Jew in American Politics. In 1976, he was the Ohio Field Director for the Carter presidential campaign and in 2012 he was the Jewish Outreach Director for the Obama for America campaign.

Ira is a member of the American Political Items Collectors. He is in awe of David Quintin's governor and U.S. Senate collection and his encyclopedic knowledge of local political memorabilia.
